

AXIOM VOLUME II

by

Philip Mazeikas

The song of a man's tongue derives from his character.

A man's assertion reflects him.

Concept and animate expression illustrate validity.

A postulate in construction lives in continuity.

Organism is toil.

The day is in the light upon the planet yet the prime of time is always.

Every man has his passion.

Diligence is its own reward.

A fool knows his word determines.

Civilization is man.

The shadow is determined by something it is not.

The directive of function of the word is its truth.
